Sea Gulls Again.

Winter in London

By Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 22.—For the first time in many years the river front of London is filled this winter with thousands of sea gulls which have come up the river from the English Channel. The gulls made a habit of spending the winter along the Thames Embankment before the war, but for the last six years they have neglected the custom and gone elsewhere.
The birds make their homes in many nooks and crannies of the buildings on the river, and under the bridges. There is a continuous supply of food for them, as the city authorities have established a daily feeding time, and in addition hundreds of loungers offer them tempting bits of food.

FROCK OF TWO PIECES

Prepared for any exigency is this little evening frock of white crepe de chine, headed in all-over design with tube beads of jet that also make a fringe for the hem. The frock's lines are youthfully slim and simple. If one should desire the dignity of a gown, a dark panne velvet wrap is worn over, that adds, with gracefully fraping sleeve and inches more at length, so much more of dignity. Sabel fur edging and large mother-of-pearl clasp are details of the wrap.

TIME TO GET BEHIND THE LEGION.

A project of the approaching year that should enlist the hearty cooperation and interested support of every citizen, is the effort to be made by the Milton LaFayette Bishop Post No. 801,
The American Legion, to realize the ambition of the members to acquire possession of a permanent home.
This thought has been in the minds of the ex-service men comprising this organization ever since they formed the post, but the ways and means whereby their desire may be realized have not yet been provided. A fund for that purpose has been growing slowly during the past few years and now approaching such proportions
as, in the judgment of the legionnaires, warrants definite action being taken during the coming year. That being the decision of the post, the time is near at hand when the community as a whole should appreciate the opportunity that will be provided to aid in securing the success of the undertaking.

In many surrounding towns Legion home projects have received most substantial support from the people and by that means have been carried through much sooner than would have been possible had the ex-service men been dependent upon their own efforts and resources alone.
In Connelville there has yet been no movement suggested, much less started, with a view to supplementing the plan of Bishop Post No. 801, to acquire its own. Plainly that time has now arrived. The post has built up a fund nearly approaching $4,000 which is, of course, far short of the amount required for the purchase or erection and equipment of a home, but it is an earnest of the desire of the post to carry out its mission.
Plans that will make it possible for the post to acquire a home have not yet been devised. The membership feels, however, that a solution of the problem should be seriously considered during the new year. What that solution may be does not now appear but working it out affords a splendid opportunity for some resourceful citizens or organizations, like the Chamber of Commerce or Kiwanis Club, to perform a very useful service to the veterans of the World War and the public as well by getting behind the Legion's home project and helping to push it to success.

Such form of cooperation or aid is the very least that can be given if the community is to escape the imputation that it is unappreciative of the service the boys of 1917-1918 rendered their country when the call to duty came.
DOMESTIC COKE MARKET AND COKE PRICES.
The Connelville region is at this time enjoying the benefits of a stimulating trade arising from a steadily increasing demand for coke for domestic use in the eastern sections of the country where anthracite coal has been the staple fuel for generations.
This new business is in part the result of the inability of the anthracite mines to produce and the railroads to move coal in sufficient quantity to supply the deficiency created by the prolonged strike of the past spring and summer. It is in other part the result of a very persistent campaign conducted by fuel dealers in the east to extend the use of coke as a substitute for anthracite, both for the purpose of increasing their coke trade and to standardize consumers with the fact that they do not have to depend angrily upon anthracite.
This persons who have taken the pains to learn how to use coke in heating furnaces, appreciate the advantage of that purpose. But having been so long wedded to one kind of fuel domestic consumers of anthracite will have been loath to change to coke and, in some instances, because their unfamiliarity with the peculiarities of this form of fuel has prevented them from obtaining the best results.
During the past few months the extensive effort has been made to educate consumers in the best methods of utilizing coke as a substitute for anthracite. Experts have made demonstrations under conditions of actual practice in heating and have been on extraordinary pains to instruct consumers how to burn coke to the best advantage. Until the demand appeared a few years ago for larger shipments of setting coke the impression

in the trade was that the missionary work of the demonstrators had not been fruitful of results proportionate to the efforts put forth.
Whether the increased call for coke for domestic heating means that any considerable number of consumers have become converted to its use, or have merely resorted to it in an emergency and will resume anthracite as soon as the latter becomes available again, is one of the uncertainties of present situation. Coke producers understand this and are not apt to be induced to enlarge production unduly on the strength of the demand which developed more or less unexpectedly.
There is probability, however, that in the wider market now being served there will be found some consumers who will continue to prefer coke to anthracite. On the other hand it is safe to assume that once the present necessity for resorting to the use of coke has passed a very appreciable falling off from this class of trade will take place. Producers realize that the bulk of coke consumption will be by furnaces and foundries, and they will continue to seek to supply this market at all times, but the experience they are now having in the domestic fuel market will no doubt make them alert to the opportunities this trade offers if it expands beyond present proportions, or as it may develop at some future time.
The present flurry has had the much desired effect of changing the price trend which two weeks ago was moving in the wrong direction to satisfy producers. Furnaces are not ready, however, to pay the same price for coke for their use that domestic consumers are willing to pay for the same grade for heater use, but there is a very distinct feeling in the trade that the price cannot be held around $5.50 or $7.00 with the expectation that producers will be willing to accept much business at that range.
Coke men like furnaces want to make a profit on their product, otherwise both will be without inducement to keep their plants in operation.

Motion Picture Dictator Hays did not show Santa Claus' usual discretion when he placed "Fatty" Ar-buckle's certificate of moral regeneration in the public's stocking.

Applying the test of sanity to hooded Ku Kluxers places the chief of police of Harrison, N. J., in the advanced class with the mayor of Indianapolis, who has classified rock-less automobile drivers as "speed nuts."

You still have this evening and all of tomorrow to make good your claim to being a real Santa Claus.

Evidently Movie Dictator Hays does not realize that there are some things, or some persons, even the fans cannot stand.

The Anthracite Tax

Chicago Black Diamond.

The Supreme Court decision in the matter of the ad valorem tax on anthracite levied by the state of Pennsylvania seemingly is one of the most important of that state recently imposed. The tax on the anthracite produced of one and one-half per cent thereof when prepared for market.
The court held that not only was this singling out of anthracite and not bituminous coal for taxation not discriminatory, but that the fact that such tax amounted to an impediment to interstate commerce was not contrary to established principles of American constitutional law.
This holds out wonderful possibilities to certain favored states. Some-ten or a dozen states produce nearly all the coal consumed in the entire nation. If Pennsylvania may levy one and one-half per cent tax on all anthracite produced, when but a relatively small proportion of it is consumed in that state, what is to prevent a five or a ten per cent tax being levied if deemed advisable? What is to prevent a similar ad valorem tax on all coal mined in any state?
Carrying the logical conclusion a little farther, any state may levy a tax on the mineral wealth produced within its confines, regardless of its destination for consumption.
The twelve coal states might, if so constrained, raise sufficient funds from the taxation of coal production to cover their total requirements, and which case the neighboring states, having no coal of their own and being compelled to buy interstate coal, would have to pay the expenses of administering the governments of the coal producing states.
This would be a fine situation for the coal states. Take the case of Illinois. Of 89,000,000 tons produced in 1931, only 28,000,000 tons were consumed by the industries and homes of the state. The remaining 61,000,000 tons were either used by the railroads or shipped to other states. By the simple expedient of taxing this coal production to a sufficient extent to make it produce all the revenue needed, Illinois citizens would be paying only about thirty-eight per cent of the cost of the government while the remaining sixty-two per cent would have to be borne by the railroads and the neighboring states.
The proposition possesses endless ramifications. Iowa might tax the wheat and corn, Louisiana the sugar, Texas the cotton and Michigan the copper and iron produced in their geographical limits to the point where the rest of the nation would be paying their bills. Then would those states not favored by nature be particularly unfortunate and the favored national pastime would be the devising of means to get some other community to pay the taxes needed to run the government of the community by levying the tax.

The Square Sellers.

Indianapolis Star.
What interests the consumer is not the number of square miles that contain coal but the number of square people that sell coal.

LINE ON A MILLION DOLLARS.

A million dollars would be nice to own.
To earn a million would be glorious sport.
Yet counting up the pleasures I have known
I am content to fall a little short.
Not for a million, eagerly desired,
Would I give up the comradeship I know.
The joy of resting when I'm worn and tired.
Or playing with the lad who loves me so.
Not for a million would I scorn my friends
And bid them wait until I've reached my goal.
I would not be a slave to selfish aims
And to the beauty round me blind
my soul.
Some of my time must go to birds and trees.
The few June roses growing near my door.
The children that are climbing to my knees.
For these bring peace of mind if nothing more.
Not for a million would I spend each day
From dawn to midnight at my dreary task.
That is too big a price for me to pay.
Too big a price for such a sum to take.
Rather I'd choose to earn a little less,
To miss the money selfishness might give.
Than to give up for such a cheap success.
The joys enriching every day I live.

A PRAYER FOR LOYALTY.

Oh God, bring back the violent hands to service in our troubled time.
Teach those who preach a selfish creed
The splendor of each joy I find
The beauty of the flag above.
So they may reverently stand
Before the altars of our land.
Bring them to us laughter and to peace.
That all disloyalty may cease.
Open their eyes that they may see
The precious gifts of liberty.
And make them who would destroy
Sure builders of a greater joy.
Teach them to use their talents well.
To grace the homes where they dwell.
To train their children to be just,
Brave, true and steadfast to a trust,
God-fearing men in every test,
Giving their country all their best.
Oh God, endow us all, we pray,
With patriotic hearts today.
Let all who share Thy kindly sun
Stand to the tasks that must be done.
Undaunted when the clouds descend,
Patient and loyal to the end.

FISH COMMISSIONER BULLER IS GUEST OF MT. PLEASANT CLUB

Speaks at Annual Meeting of Hunting and Fishing Association.

WAS A FORMER RESIDENT

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, Dec. 22.—The Mount Pleasant Hunting & Fishing Association held its annual meeting in the Opera House Building last evening, when the following officers were elected: President, C. A. Graul; vice-president, Albert Keck; secretary, Dr. J. R. Madden; corresponding secretary, Eugene Warden; treasurer, Clyde Lowe. William Galley is chairman of the game committee, and R. M. Miller was made chairman of the fish committee. Addresses were given by N. R. Bueller, fish commissioner of Pennsylvania, a former Mount Pleasant man; Rev. C. W. Hendrickson of Youngwood; and Game Warden Bert Wright of Traugh.

The association was favorably impressed with the report of the committee to make the Boy Scouts junior members of the association and held this committee to make further arrangements.

A shipment of rabbits is expected at any time and will be turned loose close to Mount Pleasant, it was announced.

Following the business meeting an oyster supper was served. A smoker followed this.

Robbery Suspect in Jail.
W. M. Marcano was taken to jail at Greensburg yesterday by Police men Joseph White. He is held for court in connection with the Feltz robbery in October. Roy Davidson, the other man held, was able to secure bail.

Beavers Win.
The Beavers, a fast basketball aggregation of boys, started off with a winning streak by taking the Fretzel five-over by a score of 28 to 21.

Vacation at Glass Plant.
The Bryce Brothers glass factory employees will have a holiday vacation next week.

Confluence

CONNELLSVILLE, Dec. 22.—A Christmas entertainment will be given by the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School in the church on Sunday evening.

Mr. George Miley was a visitor with friends in Connelville, yesterday.

Rev. C. W. Dahl is returning to his home in Ridgeway after holding a series of revival meetings in the Christian Church here for two weeks. The Lutheran Sunday School will hold a Christmas entertainment Sunday evening.

Mr. John Fick and grandson, John Fickman, left yesterday for a visit to Pittsburg.

Mrs. James May was shopping and visiting friends in Connelville yesterday.

Mrs. Parke Bender and baby have returned to her home at Ohlerville after a visit with her parents here. Mrs. Helen Brown has returned from a visit with friends at Meyersdale.

PITT FOOTBALL SCHEDULE FOR 1923 COMPLETE

PITTSBURG, Dec. 22.—The University of Pittsburgh football schedule for the season of 1923 has just been completed and includes nine games. For the first time in the history of athletics at the university a Panther team will appear in New York City, Syracuse being the attraction at the Yankees' new stadium on October 20, being the opening football game there.

The date of the annual game with the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia is November 3. The opening game is with Bucknell at Lewisburg on September 29, it being the occasion of the opening of a new stadium there. Relations are resumed with Carnegie Tech after a lapse of three years, the two Pittsburgh teams being scheduled to meet at Forbes Field on October 27. The annual classics with W. & J. and State complete the schedule.

A big feature of the schedule is that six teams will observe the one-year residence rule, namely, Lafayette, West Virginia, Syracuse, Carnegie Tech, Pennsylvania and Penn State. W. & J. will put the rule in effect in 1924. The complete schedule follows:

September 29, Bucknell University at Lewisburg; October 6, Lafayette College at Pittsburg; October 13, West Virginia University at Pittsburg; October 20, Syracuse University at New York; October 27, Carnegie Tech at Pittsburg; November 3, University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; November 10, Grove City College at Pittsburg; November 17, W. & J. College at Pittsburg; Thanksgiving, Thursday, November 29, Penn State College at Pittsburg.

Ask Dad: He Knows.
Take it up from father.
Although it causes pain—
Fall in love with the pretty girl.
But marry one that's plain.

Hard to Believe.
"I told him plainly just what I thought," she said.
"Land sakes!" her grandmother exclaimed; "how could you say such awful things to a man?"

NEW STAGE MODES

Players' Gowns, the Creations of Great Dressmakers.

Leading Artists of Country Make Study of Producing Costumes That Supply Inspiration.

The theater has become a factor of real consequence in fashions. Here lovers of the beautiful in dress, as well as students of fashion find many things that are extremely interesting to them. Here, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune, real inspiration is to be had, for, in addition to the players' gowns, which are always the creations of great dressmakers, one has the inspiration of various beautiful color effects.

The greatest artists of the country give of their best to create beautiful costumes for the stage. Indications of future styles are seen in the theaters before they appear anywhere else.

For a very long time the French theater has exerted a potent influence on fashions. The premiere of a new play is a gathering place for those interested in styles. They go to learn about dress as well as to be entertained. The American stage, while having some effect on dress, has not until recently exerted as much influence on fashions as the French theater.

There is an unusual amount of charm in the wide skirted evening frock. A slip of silver cloth is veiled by a lace skirt with overdrapings of tulle, studded with delicately colored embroidered. The wide skirt is of silver cloth. This is the type of costume which Lanvin so successfully creates for the many French actresses whom she dresses exclusively.

It will be pleasing to older women to know that the popular belief that this type of dress is only suitable to a slender young woman of graceful build has passed and that many of the greatest French dressmakers are advocating it for the older woman.

The shoes are particularly interesting and very beautiful. The Colonial slipper, with its large tongue offset by an ornamental buckle, is worn with this dress. The slipper is of broadened silver cloth, with a tongue of platted lace and an elaborate rhinestone buckle.

RIBBONS IN THE LIMELIGHT

Ray Strands Used Not Only as Sashes and Girdles, but as Trimmings for Costumes.

Ribbons are coming more and more into prominence, not only as sashes and girdles, but as trimmings for a whole costume. Among new costumes daily appearing there are brilliant spots which look like handsome embroidered, but in reality are cleverly conceived arrangements of narrow or wide ribbons, lending a deal of color to the gown. There are colored failings which, when not made of ribbons are done from bright bits of chiffon, metal cloth, brilliantly printed or plain colored silk.

For afternoon and evening wear there are a number of velvet frocks, and most of them are black, especially the more informal ones. There was one at a tea dance made with a long and snugly fitted bodice. Then there was an extremely full skirt that fitted out from that in a youthful and charming manner. The trimming was white ermine, making a thin band across the straight neck line and edging the ends of the short, little sleeves.

Lighter Tint Best.
When a dress or hat has a strong decided color, it is not advisable to use a complementary color of the same strength or luminosity, as it would form too striking a contrast. A safe rule is to select lighter tints or darker shades of the original color for trimming. The remarks made regarding good combinations hold good for trimming also.

At the Theatres

THE SOISSON.

"LORNA DOONE," which is being shown today and tomorrow at this theatre, is a picture of surpassing beauty and an enthralling love tale of the days of the "Bloody Doones." Contrasted with the early scenes of the wild moorland where peasants in quaint homes and inns live under the terrorized sway of the wild outlaw band are vivid glimpses from the magnificent court of King James where "Lorna" is taken in regal style after her rescue by the "herculean John Ridd" from the "wicked Doones." John's fight when he tears a hole through the thatched roof of the banquet hall where Lorna is being forced into marriage with Carruthers and the big battle when the aroused peasantry burns the Doone estate to the ground are two of the most dramatic episodes ever screened. Madge Bellamy, the new Thomas H. Ufa star, is an ideal "Lorna." She bears a striking resemblance to the handsome "John" risks so many perils. In the beautiful costumes which she wears in scenes at the court and Westminster Abbey she might well be mistaken for the model from whom the famous painting of "Lorna Doone" was made. John Bowers, as the conqueror of the terrible Doones, who inspired his father's "surprises" as he has done in screen characterizations.

The Christmas attraction at this theatre will be "The Eternal Flame," featuring Norma Talma, the celebrated screen actress.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE CUB REPORTER," featuring Richard Talma, is the leading attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre. More real thrills per foot of film are seen in the latest Richard Talma production, "The Cub Reporter," than in any feature production of serial heroism shown on the screen. Richard Talma, cast as Dick Harvey of the Morning Times, is called upon to do one dastardly stunt after another in his efforts to recover the Sacred Jewel of Buddha. He gets into a series of remarkable adventures. He drives head first through a straight into the sea of the Tong and gets away with the jewel. Then he braves Chinese underworld to rescue the girl stolen by the Tong and held as a hostage for the return of the jewel. Such fights and stunts as were never before attempted on the screen, through alleyways, underground passages, and over roofs, risking death in every stunt are shown.

THE ORPHEUM.

"BORDERLAND," showing today and tomorrow at this theatre presents Agnes Ayres in the stellar role. "Borderland" is a fanciful tale, different from the ordinary cinema entertainment and is particularly entertaining for this reason. A wistful spirit, a super-modern wife, a girl of 1930, a group of clever kiddies and a strained dog are delightfully mixed together in the picture. The supernatural is most effectively used for dramatic effect. The picture is based upon a theme of tremendous public interest and will please all members of the family. Miss Ayres was never so alluring as in this appealing drama of impetuous love. The story deals with a young woman, feeling herself misunderstood and mistreated, and about to wreck her life's happiness, who is guided by the spirit of an ancestor who experienced the same agony and eventually ruined her life. Incidentally Miss Ayres portrays three roles in this remarkable production. There are two stories and two complete sets of characters. She has the support of such talented players as Milton Sills, Rayman Gressley, Casson Ferguson and Sylvia Ashton.

Gloria Swanson in "Her Gilded Cage," her latest Paramount picture, will be the Christmas attraction at this theatre.

Speaks Highly of
This Home Made
Cough Remedy

Says It Acts With Unusual Speed—Loosens the Mucous—Relieves the Irritation and Stops the Cough.

Costs Next to Nothing—For a Big Supply.

"Whenever anyone in my family catches cold and begins to cough, I don't take many minutes to get this remedy that will drive away all their troubles in double quick time. If no secret—anyone can make a half pint of the finest cough medicine in the world for a trifling sum. Get from any druggist one ounce of Permat (double strength)—this is a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it. But now you've got a real medicine—and you—the first person you take this directly on the membrane of the throat and nose, the tickling ceases almost instantly—the inflammation begins to disappear—up comes the stubborn mucus and after in 24 hours every trace of the cough that frightened you is gone.

It's really remarkable how this home made remedy acts on the mucous membrane and that is one reason it is so helpful to thousands of children suffering—Advertisement.

Suddenly Developed Demand For Domestic Coke From East Stimulates Market All Grades

Spot Advances to $3.00-$3.50 on Orders from Former Anthracite Users.

FURNACE MEN NOT BUYING

At the High Figure Nor Are They Making Usual Preparations Against Post-Christmas Curtailment in Output; Future of Market Is Puzzling.

Special to The Weekly Courier.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 20.—A new power appeared in the coke market late last week and immediately took control, able being a suddenly developed demand from the east for coke for domestic use, as a substitute for anthracite. Orders were placed freely and for tonnages that seemed large, by comparison with the lots bought by furnaces when they merely want a little extra coke to take out their receipts on contract. An interesting feature of the demand was that the buyers were not particular as to grades, and various odd lots, not perhaps entirely satisfactory for metallurgical use, were readily absorbed.

The iron blast furnace is large and the domestic heating furnace small and it might at a glance seem strange that any domestic demand should count for a great deal. The proportions in the matter however are that when coke is sought as a substitute for anthracite it is sought to supplement a supply which is running at the rate of more than 2,000,000 tons a week, while the merchant production of Connellville coke has barely averaged 75,000 tons a week, and the great bulk of this production is tied up in contracts with blast furnaces, running to the end of the month. Obviously the new demand from the east immediately took control of the market.

Single sales of lots of from 10 to 25 carloads were common, and the total sales, in less than a week, probably amounted to something like 15,000 or 20,000 tons, this being of course many times as much as the trade could absorb with its recent production and the furnace requirements undiminished.

At the beginning of last week the spot furnace coke market was rather easy at $2.50, with heating coke offered at less still. In the last two or three days of the week the market advanced nearly $1.50, on an average, closing the week at $3.50 to $3.00, with additional buying this week, and a fresh casting up by operators of the cargoes they have sold, the market is easily quotable at $3.00 to $3.50. The $3.50 price has been paid in some instances by eastern buyers and it is not certain that any considerable tonnage, even of doubtful grade, could be bought at $3.00. Thus in barely a week the market has advanced nearly $2.00.

The blast furnaces have not been buyers at these advanced prices. It is question whether they have occasion to buy spot or prompt coke at this time. Usually just before the holidays there is an extra buying movement, against the possibility of shipments being curtailed by holiday celebrations among the men, but with the easy condition in coke that disappeared scarcely a week ago the furnaces are understood to have a fair leeway, in stocks and in coke en route.

Foundry coke quotations have been advanced on general principles. The foundries, not being under the necessity of buying from day to day, have held off more or less and there has been little movement at the advanced asking prices. The market now stands quotable as follows:

Spot furnace ..... $2.50 to $3.50
Spot foundry ..... $3.50 to $3.00

The trade is puzzled to form any conjectures as to the future of the market. While an advance of $1 or $2 a ton in coke seems large both to coke operators and to blast furnaces, such an amount means hardly anything to the eastern householder, as it is but a small percentage of the cost of fuel placed in his cellar. The consumers may be ready to pay higher prices still, while on the other hand there is question how the new fuel will "take" with the typical household. It makes an excellent fuel for domestic use but the householder must learn how to handle it and some householders may not give the subject the necessary attention.

The furnaces recently committed themselves by selling foundry iron for first quarter delivery at $25, Valley. They are asking $25 now but the deliveries will be at $25, a price that is very far from fitting the prices now ruling for spot coke. No contracts for furnace coke for first quarter, at first prices, are known to have been placed, and at the moment there is more or less disinclination to begin negotiations. Conservative operators are inclined to wait from their regular customers and supply a new customer, in all probability only a temporary one, but on the other hand "business is business." A price of $7.00 for furnace coke for first quarter has been suggested this week tentatively but there is doubt whether operators would contract, at the moment, at as low a figure and likewise doubt whether furnaces would be willing to pay as much. The alternative is to avoid contracts and do business from week to week.

The coal market has stiffened rather sharply this week, not on account of demand increasing materially but rather on account of many operators finding they are well sold up and withdrawing some of their offerings. Roughly speaking coal in both the Pittsburgh and Connellville markets is up about 35 cents. Pittsburgh steam coal is firm at $2.65 to $3.00 and Connellville firm at $2.50 to $2.85. Youghiogheny gas has sold at as high as $3.40, when recently it could be picked up on occasion at $3.00.

The pig iron market has been relatively quiet since the recent buying movement in foundry iron. All producers of foundry iron, having effected large first quarter sales at $25.00, Valley, are now quoting $25.00, which has both the market right along on small prompt lots. Bessemer is off 50 cents. Basic is quotable as former, but is rather soft at the figure. The market now stands as follows:

Bessemer ..... $22.50
Basic ..... $25.00
Foundry ..... $25.00

These prices are f. o. b. Valley furnaces, freight to Pittsburgh being $1.75.

Industrial Court Has Reduced Strikes

At the recent banquet of the Kanawha Coal Operators' Association at Charleston, W. Va., Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas spoke in praise of the Industrial Relations Court of his state, declaring that since it started functioning three years ago the number and seriousness of coal mine strikes had been greatly reduced.

"We have found that if the proper protection is afforded by the state," said Governor Allen, "the average workman will desert the agitator and get to work and give an honest day's labor to his employer. The right to work should be just as sacred as the right to loaf and it is the duty of the government to protect all men in their natural inclinations, which come within the law."

Referring to a recent statement credited to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, Governor Allen said the "most frequently uttered misrepresentation of the objects of the industrial court on the part of labor leaders is its taking away from a man his God-given right to work. The law does nothing of the kind. Any man may quit work under the act whenever he wishes."

"No interference is afforded any man to choose his own occupation at will. But the law does forbid a conspiracy to close down any essential industry and it gets when a man quits work he shall not come back and try to persuade or force others to quit."

During the recent coal strike, Kansas produced, according to official figures, more than 50 per cent of its annual normal output of coal, Governor Allen said.

"On the day non-union miners, in peaceful pursuit of work and happiness, were chopped to pieces by a frenzied mob at Herrin, Ill., there were 400 deep shafts in operation at normal capacity with union labor in Kansas," he asserted, adding that the industrial court merely fixes the responsibility of the state in administering industrial justice.

"It is a board of adjudication, rather than a system of arbitration, generally resorted to in disputes between capital and labor. It is a board of three disinterested judges as compared with an equal number of each side to the dispute ordinarily used in arbitration."

Coke Source in France. French iron and steel firms are still complaining of a scarcity of coke which prevents re-lighting of furnaces. German deliveries under treaty continue short. Of 221 blast furnaces in France, only 169 are in blast.

Big Development in W. Va. The Edward Hines coal and lumber interests, Chicago, have purchased 2,000 acres of Pittsburgh coal on Indian run, Monongalia county, W. Va., which is to be developed at a cost estimated at $5,000,000.

Freight Reduction Denied. The Interstate Commerce Commission has denied reduction in freight rates on pig iron from the Birmingham to Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago territory points.

Many Locomotives Need Repair. On November 15 the number of railroad locomotives in need of repair was 18,356 or 28.5 per cent of the number on line—a decrease of 16 from November 1.

More By-Product Ovens. It is reported in the Yonkersville district that the Republic Iron & Steel Company contemplates the construction of additional by-product ovens.

Uncle Sam Mixes In the Turkish Broil

Almost any pleasant morning, these last five weeks, a smooth-shaven, boyish-looking American could have been seen walking bareheaded from the Hotel Beaurivage in Lausanne along the lakeside to another hotel, to join a company of top-hatted, frock-coated, dignified European diplomats.

If Richard Washburn Child was only an "unofficial observer" at the Lausanne Conference it would be difficult to deny that he was the "observed of all observers." An "unofficial" server on such occasions as these is generally supposed to be seen and not heard, but Ambassador Child has been heard—and listened to attentively—at Lausanne. Europe heard this representative of a nation officially committed to non-interference in European affairs arise day after day to state definitely and forcefully the policy of the United States on points of controversy between the Western Powers and the new Turkey which has replaced the "Sick Man of Europe."

Press correspondents at Lausanne have called attention to the leading part played in the deliberations by our observers. What does this mean, our editors have been wondering, as they read the dispatches from the Swiss city. Are we really intervening? "Isn't Mr. Child wading into the Lausanne Conference rather more deeply than is permitted to a mere observer?" queries the Dallas News (Dem.). The United States, remarks the Utica Press (Ind.), "would appear to be in a position of playing an important if not a decisive role." Others wonder what will come next.

The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST this week (Dec. 23) takes up the story of American participation at Lausanne as sketched from day to day by correspondents and interpreted by contemporaneous editorial comment. Other timely news-articles in this number are:

ANOTHER GAIN FOR SCIENCE!

Information as to Respiration of Insects Said to Have Been Accurately Ascertained.

A scientist abroad has constructed a delicate instrument that registers and measures the respiration of insects. The apparatus is composed of a crystal tube with an aperture in the end. Impregnated in this, the insect, in the effort to extricate itself, turns over, bringing his thorax immediately under a needle having a ball in the point. In this way, thanks to the preceding and descending movement of the needle working over a lever, the movements of the thorax are registered on a plate or metal leaf. It is thus possible to study attentively the quickness and the length of each breath of the insect and, what is more important, the strength and action. By this means it has been ascertained that insects respire in a manner directly the reverse of human beings. We are required to put the necessary strength into the inspiration, while expelling it is largely automatic. The insect, on the other hand, inhales automatically, but expels with more trouble.

What is "Sheffield Plate"? The process of welding silver plates on both sides of a copper sheet took the name of "Sheffield plate" from the English town. Electroplating superseded this practice, and today the term is used recklessly in the trade, for products of superior and inferior quality alike, because it conveys a suggestion of "quality" to the buyer. Fifty per cent of the manufacturers, in conference with the federal trade commission, have condemned this practice, defined the word as meaning "an article well plated on a base metal of nickel silver of not less than 10 per cent nickel content," and agreed to abide by this definition in their own business. The federal trade commission is inclined to disapprove of the use of the word as a trade name or mark for silver-plated hollow-ware, irrespective of definition. Scientific American.

Underground Storage of Coal At Mines Suggested as Means Of Accumulating a Reserve

Would Stabilize Industry and Protect Consumers From Shortages.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Storage of coal underground at the mines is suggested by Director H. Foster Bain of the Bureau of Mines as a practical step toward the accumulation of those reserves of fuel which are necessary to stabilize industry and to protect the domestic consumer in periods of acute coal shortage, such as the country has recently undergone.

The seasonal demand for coal can to some extent be met by storage, but this must be done by the consumer or by some clearing agent operating between him and the mine, says Dr. Bain in a report made to the United States Coal Commission. At the mines the best place to store coal is in the ground and with underground storage it is not feasible to provide more than a limited amount of storage above ground.

The anthracite companies established near points of consumption a system of great storage piles which were valuable balance wheels to the trade and have facilitated that steadiness of operation which distinguishes anthracite from bituminous mining. Large-scale storage of bituminous coal has been less practicable because the uncertainty as to future price—a result of the excess capacity of the mines and the keen competition—has deterred companies and individuals from making the necessary investment. The same factors tend to discourage individual consumers from storing in summer coal that will not be burned all winter. In periods of advancing prices or of anticipated shortage, however, as much as 60,000,000 tons of bituminous coal has actually gone into storage. This is enough under normal conditions to stabilize the industry and also to contradict effectively those who doubt the technical feasibility of storing soft coal.

With proper selection of the coal and due attention to modern requirements as to methods, it is entirely practicable to store large quantities of most coal at moderate cost, continues Dr. Bain. The risk is in the uncertainties as to future price, as the mine and the equipment of the country is extensively enough to allow industry, except under unusual conditions, to obtain adequate supplies direct from the mines. Coal shortage and our shortage is a local matter in normal years. The nation has put men and money into coal mining and the railways to meet peak loads rather than provide a less amount of capital for coal storage and so insure steady and economical operation. The whole problem of coal storage has recently been reviewed by H. H. Stock, consulting engineer to the Bureau of Mines, and a report is being prepared which will place the facts at the disposal of all persons interested.

The possibility of devising a use classification that will permit a wider pooling of coal is also suggested by Dr. Bain. "Such pooling would relieve the pressure on docks, terminals, and railway equipment," he declares. Most users of coal lack facilities for selecting the grades best suited to their needs, and most coal is sold on its name or on the reputation of the operating company or local dealer. A good name is a valuable asset in business and when one has been built up it should be preserved as a public benefit, but this should not be accomplished with the perfecting of some system whereby a buyer could have a definite measure of predetermined value in his coal.

A system that would justify penalizing dirty coal and would assure each grade getting on its merit would be in the public interest. If such valuable products as cotton, potatoes, and wheat can be satisfactorily graded for delivery in the public markets it would seem not too much to ask that a similar system be applied to coal. A basic difficulty is that of sampling and measuring without undue expense a commodity handled in such quantity. It is much more difficult to sample coal by hundreds of trainloads than to grade potatoes by the box or even the carload. In coal, too, there is the fundamental difficulty of the wide range in sizes as compared with grains of wheat or corn. Provisional systems have been worked out and are being regularly applied by the Bureau of Mines in supervising purchases of coal for the federal fuel yard in Washington, the Interstate Coal Commission, and other government establishments. Much time and thought have been devoted to the subject and further studies are under way. The general desirability of simplifying the marketing and transportation of coal, and of establishing grades responsive to use, with further provision of effective and not too expensive methods of testing the coal flowing in commerce is undoubted, and it is to this end that the Bureau of Mines is working.

"In the long run it is believed that as technical and economic conditions in the industry progressively improve, the social and labor conditions will largely care for themselves."

Easily Managed

YOU must believe in Santa Claus if in neglect you would not pause to see the holidays drift by and bring you nothing but a sigh.

He may not greet you if you wait in idleness and selfish state. For him upon his way to start, to grant the wishes of your heart.

For he is wise makes known to men by means that are beyond our ken, and as his journeying vast is made he uses many a masquerade.

He is a scarcity you fear in the supply of Christmas cheer. Just hush and let him pass, and he will be old Santa Claus yourself.

A Christmas Eve In Camp

By F. H. Sweet

ALP a dozen unshaven, red-shirted miners were gathered about the dingy counter of Bilger's, the one store in camp. It was Christmas eve, and they wanted something extra for their dinner on the morrow—just to keep them in mind of the day, they said. But there was little now in the forenoon remnant of cans upon the shelves, or in the half-empty barrels and boxes under the counter, and massed in the corners of the room. One man found a stray box of sardines, and took possession of it with the remark that, while it was not "Christmas," he could have the satisfaction of knowing he was eating the only sardines in camp; another drew out a can of Boston baked beans from behind a squadron of tomatoes; while a third, of more investigating and determined turn of mind, hunted among the boxes and barrels until he actually discovered a can of Cape Cod cranberries.

This brought the entire group of Christmas hunters into a compact, envious circle; and while they were anxiously debating the pro and con—especially the con—of a division of spoils, the door opened quietly and a broad-shouldered, watery-eyed man entered.

"Have you got any toys?" he asked, hesitatingly.

The storekeeper stared, and unaccountably, as though by preconcerted arrangement, the group around the counter and stared also.

"Any-what?" the storekeeper asked blankly.

"Toys," the man repeated looking at the encircling faces with abashed embarrassment—"things to play with, I mean, like children have at Christmas."

"You mean," with a curious mingling of apology and pride in his voice, "my little ten-year-old boy came in on the stage just now—clean from his grandma's back to Missouri. I've been sendin' for him these two years, but couldn't seem to get to it till I struck a vein last month."

He turned heavily against the counter. His watery eyes began to fill, partly through his condition and partly from some long dormant tenderness which was beginning to awaken.

"The boy's consider'ble childish," he went on, running his hand over his eyes, "the consequences of being listened to by men who usually passed him without recognition, 'an' likes things to play with. So, bawn' it's Christmas, an' he's just comin', why, I thought maybe I'd better hunt some toys."

"Oh," cried Dobson, the sheriff, heavily, and "Of course," "Of course," came promptly from others at the group.

And then they looked about the store, inquiringly, eagerly, in search of something that would please a ten-year-old boy who was childish.

But there was little they saw; only huge miners' boots, pyramids of picks and shovels, barrels of flour and beans and pork; and on the shelves, tobacco and canned goods, and a small assortment of earthen and tinware; and then, at the far end of the store, a bar for the accommodation of those who were thirsty.

There were no dry and fancy goods and notions upon the shelves, no show-cases upon the counter, no display in the one dingy window. Such things would begin to make their appearance only with the coming of the first woman, and that was not yet.

"Rather a slim show for playthings," said the owner of the cranberries, after a fruitless search with his eyes from one end of the store to the other. "Don't s'pose a pack of playin' cards would do?" as his gaze paused hopefully on an extensive assortment of that popular article.

"They has pictures on 'em."

"Wouldn't do at all," answered Dobson decidedly. "They ain't moral; an' the first kid who patronizes us has got to be brought up moral. Say, you," to the watery-eyed man, who was edging towards the bar at the far end of the store, "none o' that."

"None o' what?" asked the man querulously. "I ain't steppin' on your toes."

"No, but you are on the kid's. See here." His voice had an incisive ring which had made many stronger men tremble. "You ain't walkin' the same line you was twenty-four hours ago. Then you was a poor, no-count drunkard, who'd a right to dig his grave without opposition from nobody; now you're markin' out a trail for that kid to follow. See? He an' my friends here ain't no call to interfere between father an' son," dropping his voice to an easy, familiar tone, and placing a hand encouragingly upon the tremulous shoulder, "so long as the father makes a good deal; but when he stumps—his voice was still soft, but the steady giant returned to his eyes—"then me an' my friends step in. Sub? Bawn' the first kid in camp, we've constituted ourselves his guardian—just like every man in the place will do 's'oon's they hear of his bein' here."

He turned back to his companions. The watery-eyed man, after one long, wistful, farewell glance toward the bar, resumed his fruitless search of the goods. There was nothing now to divide his attention; he knew the men with whom he had to deal, and realized that henceforth the bar was to be as far removed from him as though a wall of granite intervened. But to his credit be it said, even with the realization came a new firmness to his eyes.

"What's that on the top shelf?" he asked suddenly.

"That? Oh, that is—dunno," hesitated the storekeeper, as he took down the object in question and examined it critically. "It got in with some goods a year ago, an' has been up there ever since."

"Why, you clump!" cried the cranberry owner derisively, "not to know a jumpin' jack when you see one! I've bought lots of 'em to home for the children. See!" and he pulled a string which sent the acrobat tumbling up over the top of his red pole. "Just that thing for a kid!"

"Just the thing," repeated the watery-eyed man, drawing a small bag of gold dust from his pocket. "It'll make the boy laugh."

As he was going out, the owner of the cranberries stepped to his side.

"Here, take this along with you," he said, relinquishing the can to which he had been clinging so fondly. "It'll help to make out a Christmas for the boy."

"And this, too," "And this," added the owner of the sardines and the owner of the baked beans; and then Sheriff Dobson pushed before them and slipped something bright and heavy into the hand which held the jumpin' jack.

"It's a nest-egg for the kid," he said gravely. "Now you better go home an' fill up his stockin'; an' to-morrow you can tell him Merry Christmas from us all."

The Evergreen Tree

By Christopher G. Hazard

(C. 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE servants had retired and left the old lady alone. She sat before the decorated and lighted tree that was burdened with gifts that seemed to have no destinations. For Mrs. Stone was long past the wanting of gifts and companions, young or old, set with her, because she wished to be alone with her memories.

She was not at all alone as she seemed to be, for, in the great chair opposite to hers memory placed the fairy figure of the child who had glanced and danced about the house and under the Christmas tree of long ago. Beside her there sat one who seemed to lay his hand again upon hers in happy and satisfied affection, while there bent over her the strong and tender youth who was once her hope for later years. Again the old house seemed full of joy, and noisy merriment drove out the doleful sadness, while the tree that is always green spoke of the immortality of happiness.

The next day, when the servants dismantled the evergreen tree, it was found that every gift was marked with a name, and they were busy that Christmas morning in distributing new happiness about the neighborhood.

Great Savers. How our mothers and grandmothers would have appreciated the wonderful efficient electrical appliances of the present day. Probably most of all the electric washer and ironer, because, if the proper machines are selected, they represent the greatest economy. Not only do they save money, time and backbreaking drudgery, but the very clothes themselves.

THE GENERAL UTILITY COAT

This coat, combining smartness and serviceability, may offer a suggestion as to what is being worn for this purpose in Paris. It is made of brown wide-waisted velours with insets of the same material cut crosswise at waist and hemline to relieve the severity and stiffness.

CLOSING COAT AT ONE SIDE

New Idea for Long Garment Is Meeting With the Approval of the Fashion Designers.

The idea of closing a long coat at one side is taking hold of the fashion designers. That having been accomplished, the coat drapes from that point in the most interesting manner. One of these is made of a light chocolate shade of brown. The material is a soft wool velours which drapes so interestingly and lends its folds around the figure to bring that out in bold relief, no matter what may be the thickness of dressing underneath. There is for this coat a surprise collar of a puffy platinum fox fur and it folds around the neck until the coat is fastened to be becoming. The sleeves are cut so that they come out from the waistline in thick, huge folds and they end in wide cuffs trimmed with bands of the same fur. At the side front, where the coat closes, there is a buckle of jade which lends a touch of that portion of the garment and fastens a reason for the draping to start at that point.

The skirt of this coat is cut and draped in one of those irregular lines characteristic of the wraps of the present day. Nothing goes along regularly for each individual garment seems to take a path of its own to exhibit a manner which is a thing of itself. Under this coat there is worn a dress made of the same material, but the lines are made in the simplest of manner with only little ruffings of lace. It manages to leave the way clear for the coat, which takes the center of the stage and announces the fact clearly that its design shall be the thing that counts in that particular arrangement of fashion's ways.

FANCY FOR SILVER TRIMMING

Braid and Ornaments, Corsage and Belt or Sash Promise to Remain in Favor.

Fancy for silver trimming remains unabated—silver braid and silver ornaments, silver corsage and silver belt or sash. The early Victorian mode of evening frocks for the debutante—light-colored corsets with wide and billowing skirts slightly hooped at the sides—is still being worn, and is likely to continue throughout the winter.

The palest shades of yellow with silver lace brings back girlhood and form like a dominating color scheme for the kind of a frock. Another color combination much favored is lavender or sweet pea shades with berries or drapery of white or silver lace.

PAINTED AND GILDED LACE

Rainbow Tints Varied With Glints of Gold; Fast Dyes of Colors Should Be Used.

For those on the lookout for some novel touch, a new departure for trimming is painted and gilded lace. Only the coarsest type of lace is used, and this is touched into rainbow tints, varied with glints of gold until the original color is entirely painted over. Pattern and design are not studied, and the effect is of "rain" colors without attempt at tinting border or motif in any definite or repeated shade.

It is suggested to those who propose to utilize this novelty trimming that fast dyes or colors should be used for the purpose of tinting the lace.

New Fancy in Ribbon

A garter ribbon woven with a back so that the only work required to have an attractive garter is to run the elastic through and sew up the seam is one of the novelties of the day. The ribbon is in all colors and in a large variety of combinations of colors.

PLAN AIR LINES IN UNITED STATES

New York-Chicago Will Be First of Dirigible Routes.

AIRSHIPS WILL BE SMALL

Combination of German Technical Skill and American Capital Back of Scheme—Will Provide Modern Comfort and Can Travel at 87 Miles an Hour—Service Can Easily Be Extended to Any Part of the United States.

A plan for the establishment of numerous new air lines in the United States with the combined technical skill of Germany and American capital was brought back to Berlin recently by Herr Schuetz, of the Schuetz-Land dirigible works, one of the most extensive concerns of the Germans during the war.

Herr Schuetz declares that plans are practically perfected for the opening of a line from New York to Chicago with a craft of German design having capacity of from 119,000 to 150,000 cubic meters. Working out of such craft in Germany was forbidden after the war by the treaty. Hence the proposal to build and operate them in America would result both in the development of American air lines, which is much desired there, and at the same time preserve German interest in continuing the development of air navigation.

Herr Schuetz declared that the airships of the capacity planned for the New York-Chicago line are as small as can be built and still give satisfaction. They afford passenger space enough to make the business a paying one and give room on board for all modern comforts. The plans show restaurants, smoking rooms, sleeping and living compartments, baths and promenade decks. The speed is reckoned at 100 kilometers per hour and could be increased to 140 kilometers or about 87 miles.

Can Extend Service.
Herr Schuetz declares that the service can easily be extended to any part of the United States if the proper repairs shops and landing stages are constructed. The methods he proposed would permit landings in the center of cities by overhead stages. He said that once a country with the resources and ingenuity of America takes advantage of the steps attained by the German builders, transatlantic lines would be within the realm of possibility and round-the-world lines would be the next development.

Until recently when at the international air convention restrictions were withdrawn flying had suffered greatly in Germany. Now, however, planes can pass over countries of power represented at the convention, but building of the larger types is still forbidden by the rules drawn up at the conclusion of the war. Airplane lines developed greatly in Germany during the summer and, while many of them did not connect with outside lines, they did much to keep the interest of plane builders alive.

Perhaps the biggest development was the establishment of the route from Koenigsberg to Moscow. This is considered so important that it will be kept up throughout the winter while many other lines are abandoned. The London to Berlin line, just now being got into shape for operation, is another big achievement of the year.

To Connect With Other Lines.
"What we have lacked heretofore," said Major von Tschudi, one of the most important figures in Germany's air activities, "was connections with other lines. This lack was not altogether due to political reasons. It is true that flying over some countries was forbidden, but, as in the case of the Berlin-Moscow line, the distance from Berlin to Koenigsberg was not made by air because it was considered more convenient to passengers. A number of reasons lay behind the lack of co-ordination among the various countries, including lack of subsidies for opening routes through territories where good connections could be made."

The way is in sight now, however, for connections with the French line from Paris to Warsaw, touching Prague and Strassbourg and with the line from Breslau to Budapest via Vienna. The idea of state subsidies has been recognized by the German government, but thus far the service has not been given great impetus by the money received. "Good organization and connections with lines to other countries, however, combined with improved planes, will make vast improvements in coming years."

A Pair of Stockings

By Christopher G. Hazard

BUDDY SMITH had three ideas about his stockings—they were full of feet, full of holes, and they could be full of presents. It was with regard to the third idea that he was paying attention to the second. Willing to go barefoot under the circumstances, he was tying up the holes in his best stocking, with a view to the Christmas possibilities. His sister, Agnes, had already hung up a much longer stocking, with a note attached in which she informed all who might be concerned that this one was hers. But Agnes, like the monkey that used a rabbit for a muff and kept himself warm by hugging it was a little selfish. Not only had she hung up one of her mother's stockings, but she had got an advantage over Buddy in the matter of the chocolate cake in the cupboard, for there were holes all round it the size of her little finger.

So it was that on Christmas morning the shorter stocking had the most in it.

An Aid to Packing.
Friend—Come home to dinner with me tonight, old chap.
Fattig—Does your wife know you are inviting me?
Friend—Well, not you, especially, but you see she's going away on a visit and she asked me to be sure and bring home some heavyweight to sit on her trunk.

A Pledge

Ranking first by a wide margin in the production of player pianos, it is fitting that Gulbransen give a pledge to our public—

A Pledge to continue branding the price of each Gulbransen in the back, at the factory, for the protection of our customers.

A Pledge never to make a Gulbransen and send it out under any other name, thus preserving Gulbransen quality for Gulbransen buyers.

A Pledge always to keep bright our ideal of providing exceptional music for all classes of homes, at modest prices.

A Pledge that the ease of playing and instant control you enjoy in the Gulbransen will ever be the standard of excellence among all player pianos.

"FORGOTTEN"

This, the World's Greatest Christmas Cartoon, has stimulated thousands of folks to make some otherwise forgotten child happy on Christmas morning. It ought to move YOU to see that no child in Connellsville and vicinity is made to suffer the bitter disappointment so strikingly depicted in this inspired picture of childish distress on what should have been the happiest day of the year—perhaps of a child's whole life.

SCHOOLGIRLS TAKE TO HOCKEY AS EARLY WINTER SPORT

Hockey is the early winter sport. No need to fear inertia after the tennis season is over. Just get a club and a puck and turn out. It's predicted that hockey as a girl's pastime will gain formidable popularity now that numerous athletic organizations are sponsoring it. The photograph shows Lakeside schoolgirls in a hockey session in Lincoln park, Chicago.

OUTFIELDER MILLER IS TERRIFIC HITTER

Change of Pace Is His Only Real Weakness at Bat.

Chicago Cub—Fly Chaser Is Not Slow for One Weighing 206 Pounds, and Is Hard Man to Pitch to When He Is Going Right.

Black Miller, who has a regular job left field for the Chicago Cubs, is the son of a world-renowned strong man, a quaint humorist, a terrific slugger—has no real weakness except that he is bothered by a change of pace, just like any other batter. Is a fairly accurate judge, too, so tremendously slow for a heavy-weight, 206 pounds in condition, and one who sometimes falls into a batting slump, like the best of them.

Miller is a real drawing card because of his unusual history and personality. Chicago fans should not, under the idea that Black is any world-classer as an outfielder, because he isn't. But he is a hard man to pitch to when going right.

In talking with a Portland pitcher, he has fixed Black scores of times. He said that many persons think Miller is weak on a low ball on the inside, but that Black frequently hits the ball hard. Moreover, any pitcher trying to speculate on any supposed Outfielder Hack Miller.

Weakness of the former Oakland star is due for the surprise of his young life.

Any batter can be made to look foolish with the change of pace, but there are few who have it down pat enough to be effective at all times. Miller is a heavy-weight, 206 pounds in condition, and one who sometimes falls into a batting slump, like the best of them.

Miller is a team not an individual player. He is not the sort that hungers for publicity, but is the kind that gets it easily because he is so different from most ball stars.

Chicago will invade the West for a season's work with Nebraska next year.

The BLIND MAN'S EYES

By William MacFie,
Edwin Palmer

ILLUSTRATIONS BY
R. H. Livingston

Copyright by Little, Brown and Company

He put his hand on the rail and started to descend the stairs. He was almost steady in step and he had firm grasp on the rail; he noticed that now he was at the top. When he had reached the top of the stairs, he noticed that the sound of firing, his blindness, as always when something was happening about him, was obscured upon him. He felt helpless because he was blind, not because he had been injured. He had forgotten entirely that for almost two weeks he had not stirred from bed; he had risen and stood and walked, without staggering, as the doctor had said, and the stairs before him, now he remembered. So what he already had done showed him that he had merely again to put his foot on the stairs and he could go on. He went down the stairs almost steadily.

The blind count stairs, and he had gone down twenty-one—and realized his facility; but now he would not retreat or merely call for help.

"Who is here?" he asked distinctly. "Is anyone here? Who is here?"

No one answered. And now Santone knew by the sense which let him feel whether it was night or day, that the room was really dark—dark for others as well as for himself; the lights were not burning. So an exaltation, a sense of physical capability, came to Santone; in the dark he was as fit as any capable as any other man.

He stepped down on the floor, and his uncertainty as to the position of the furniture, felt along the wall. There were bookcases there, but he felt and passed along them swiftly, until he came to the case which concealed the safe at the left side of the door. The books were gone from that case; his bare toes struck against them, where they had been thrown down on the floor. The blind man, his pulse beating tumultuously, put his hand through the case and felt the wheel behind. That was all back, opening the safe; and the door of the safe stood open. Santone's hands felt within the safe swiftly. The safe was empty.

He recoiled from it, choking back an ejaculation. The entry to this room had been made for this purpose which he supposed; and the thieves must have succeeded in their errand.

The blind man, in his uselessness for pursuit, could delay calling others to aid for him no longer. He started toward the bell, and some sense on the floor—not of the sort to be accounted for by an object moved by the wind—sounded behind him. Santone swung toward the sound and stood listening again; and then, groping with his hands stretched out before him, he felt the wall and stepped toward the center of the room. He took two steps—three, four—with no result; then his foot trod into some fluid, thick and sticky and not cold.

Santone stopped and put a finger into the fluid and brought it near his nose. It was what he supposed it must be—blood. He could hear now someone's breathing—more than one person's—from the house, still shut by the double, sound-proof doors, he could hear nothing; but someone outside the house was hurrying up to the open window at the south end of the room.

That one came to, or just inside the window, parting the curtains. He was breathing hard from exertion or from excitement.

"Who is it?" Santone challenged clearly.

"Basil!" Blatchford's voice exclaimed his recognition in amazement. "Basil! that is you! What are you doing down here?" Blatchford started forward.

"What brought you here?" Santone demanded instead of reply. "You were running outside, why? What was out there? What did you see?"

"Basil, I didn't see anything—except the window here open when I came up. But I heard shots, Basil. What has happened here?"

Santone felt again the stickiness at his feet. "Three or four persons fought in this room, Wallace. Some or one was hurt. There's blood on the floor. There are two here I can hear breathing; I suppose they're hurt. Probably the rest are gone. Get help. I think those who aren't hurt are gone. They must be gone. But—get help fast, Wallace!"

"And leave you here?" Blatchford rejoined. He had not halted again; the blind man heard his cousin still moving along the wall. The electric switch clicked, and Santone knew that the room was flooded with light. Santone strengthened, turned, turning his head a little better to listen. With the flashing on of the light, he had heard the sharp, involuntary start of Blatchford as he saw the room; and, besides that, Santone heard movement now elsewhere in the room. Then the blind man heard his friend's cry: "Good God!"

"What is it?" Santone cried.

"Good God! Basil!"

"Who is it, Wallace?" the blind man knew now that his friend's incoherence came from recognition of someone not alone from some sight of horror.

"Basil! It is—it must be—I know that! It is—"

other shot. This was not fired by the same one who had just fired; at least, it was not from the same part of the room; and, instantly, from another side, a third shot came. Then, in the midst of rush and confusion, another shot roared; the light was out again; then all was gone; the noise was outside; the room was still except for a cough and choke as Blatchford—somewhere on the floor in front of the blind man—tried again to speak.

Basil Santone, groping with his hands, found him. He was still conscious. Santone knew that he was trying his best to speak, to say just one word—a name—to tell whom he had seen and who had shot him; but he could not.

Santone put his hand over a hand of his cousin. Blatchford's fingers closed lightly on Santone's; they did not relax but now remained closed, though without strength. The blind man bowed and then lifted his head. His friend was dead, and others were rushing into the room—the butler, one of the chauffeurs, Avery, more men-servants; the light was on again, and amid the tumult and alarms of the discoveries shown by the light, some rushed to the windows to the south in pursuit of those who had escaped from the room. Avery and one or two others rushed up to Santone; now the blind man heard, above their cries and alarms, the voice of his daughter. She was beside him, where he knelt next the body of Blatchford, and she put back others who crowded about.

"Father! What has happened? Why are you here? Oh, Father, Cousin Wallace!"

"He is dead," Santone said. "They shot him! They were three, at least. One was not with the others. They fired at each other, I believe, after one shot him." Santone's hand was still in Blatchford's. "I heard them below." He told shortly how he had gone down, how Blatchford had entered and been shot.

The blind man still kneeling, heard the ordering and organizing of others for the pursuit; now women servants from the other part of the house were taking charge of affairs in the room. There had been no signal heard, Santone was told, upon any of the bells which he had tried to ring from his room. Eaton was the only person from the house who was missing.

"They came, at least some of them came"—Santone had risen, fighting down his grief over his cousin's death—for what was in your safe, Harriet?"

"I know; I saw it open."

"What is gone?" Santone demanded.

He heard her picking up the contents of the safe from the floor and carrying them to the table and examining them.

"Why—nearly all the formal papers seem to be gone; lists and agreements relating to a dozen different things."

"None of the correspondence?"

"No; that all seems to be here."

Santone was breathing quickly; the trust for which he had been ready to die—for which Blatchford had died—seemed safe.

"We don't know whether he got it, then, or not." It was Avery's voice which broke in upon him; Santone merely listened.

"He? Who?" He heard his daughter's challenge.

"Why, Eaton. It is plain enough what happened here, isn't it?" Avery answered. "He came here to this room for what he was after—for what he has been after from the first—whatever that may have been! He came prepared to force the safe and get it! But he was surprised."

"By whom?" the blind man asked.

"By whoever it is that has been following him. I don't attempt to explain who they were, Mr. Santone; for I don't know. But—whatever they were—in doing this, he laid himself open to attack by them. They were watching—saw him enter here. They attacked him here. Wallace switched on the light and recognized him; so he shot Wallace and ran with whatever he could grab up of the contents of the safe, hoping that by luck he'd get what he was after."

"It isn't so—it isn't so!" Harriet denied.

Her father checked her; he stood an instant thoughtful. "Who is directing the pursuit, Donald?" he asked.

Avery went out at once. The blind man turned to his daughter.

"Now, Harriet," he commanded. She understood that her father would not move till she had seen the room for him.

"There was some sort of a struggle near my safe," she said. "Anything—everything there is knocked about."

"Yes."

"There is also blood there—a big spot of it on the floor."

"I found that," said Santone. "There are bullet marks everywhere—above the mantel, all about."

"How was the safe opened?"

"The combination has been cut completely away; there is an—an instrument connected with the electric light fixture which seems to have done the cutting. There is a hand-drill, too—I think it is a hand-drill. The inner door has been drilled through, and the catches drawn back."

"Who is this?"

The valet, who had been sent to Eaton's room, had returned with his report. "Mrs. Eaton went from his room fully dressed, sir," he said to Santone, "except for his shoes. I found all his shoes in his room."

During the report the blind man felt his daughter's grasp on his arm become tense, and relax and lighten again. Then, as though she realized she was adding to his comprehension of what she had already betrayed, she suddenly took her hand from her father's arm. Santone let the servants, at his daughter's direction, help him to his room. His daughter stood beside him while the nurse washed the blood-streaks from his hands and feet. When the nurse had finished, he still felt his daughter's presence; she drew nearer to him.

His Luck

(C. 1939, Western Newspaper Union)
"WELL, I'll be getting lots of presents soon," he said. He had just met some pleasant new friends.
"Yes," he continued, "Christmas is a good time for me. You see I'm popular with wives. I get notes from hundreds of them; there are any number of ways to me, and when Christmas comes they knit ties for me or buy a handsome silk handkerchief or two, or a fine muffer—a little thought of me at any rate. And I've never been in a divorce case yet," he ended.
"You must be a diplomat or luckier than you deserve," someone remarked.
"Neither," he answered. "I'm a milkman and a milkman's Christmas is apt to be full of cheer and the good-will of women of the ladies!"

Sports Outfit.
A sweater coat of olive and gray checks about an inch wide has a band of plain blue about the edge of the collar and is worn with a light blue or gray jersey cap. A gray team with a blue button completes a smart outfit for sports wear.
